

SELF-DIRECTED RESEARCH ABROAD

UBC undergraduate and graduate Students have the opportunity to undertake research activity hosted by a faculty supervisor at a recognized university or research institute abroad. Go Global supports students through advising and by assisting with the logistics between UBC and the host university. Students undertaking research abroad are eligible to be considered for funding through the Go Global Self-Directed Research Award.

UBC FACULTY MEMBER ENDORSEMENT

As part of the process in undertaking a self-directed research experience abroad, students are asked to obtain an endorsement from a professor in their home faculty.

By signing below, the faculty member agrees that the proposed research activity is academically relevant and beneficial to the student’s academic study. The faculty member is not agreeing to provide supervision to the student, nor to grant credit for the experience. Should the option exist in the student’s academic department, they may decide to pursue credit for the activity.
